As the investigation into Tuesday's terror attack in lower Manhattan continues, Mayor Bill de Blasio, NYPD Commissioner James O'Neill and Gov. Andrew Cuomo urged New Yorkers to remain resilient — and expect increased security across the city and for Sunday's still-on NYC Marathon. Stay informed at metro.us.

NEW YORK CITY TERROR SUSPECT CHOSE HALLOWEEN IN HOPES OF KILLING MORE

ISIS Terror suspect Sayfullo Saipov asked for an ISIS flag to be displayed in his New York City hospital room, according to a criminal complaint filed Wednesday. Police said Saipov, 29, hit several innocent people with a rental truck on Tuesday in what officials said was a deliberate act of terror. The criminal complaint also said Saipov waived his Miranda rights and said he "felt good about what he had done." The Uzbek national reportedly left a note in his truck pledging allegiance to ISIS. He also told investigators he considered displaying the ISIS flag in the front and back of the pickup truck, but was worried it would draw too much attention. The complaint went on to say Saipov specifically chose Halloween for the attack date because he thought "there would be more civilians on the street." Originally, Saipov planned to strike people on the West Side Highway then head to the Brooklyn Bridge to continue the attack. He told investigators he practiced maneuvering his truck for a few weeks. Officials said they recovered nearly 100 videos from his phone; some showed instructions on how to build a bomb while others showed beheadings. Saipov faces charges of providing material to support a foreign terrorist organization (ISIS) and using a motor vehicle as a weapon.

4 THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

MATERIALS SEIZED IN 2011 BIN LADEN RAID RELEASED

3 A computer recovered in the 2011 U.S. special forces operation that killed Osama bin Laden contained a video collection that included kids' cartoons, several Hollywood movies and three documentaries about himself. The list of the videos was included in the release by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency of nearly 470,000 files found on the computer seized in the May 2, 2011, U.S. raid on the al Qaeda founder's hideout in Abbottabad, Pakistan. It is the fourth tranche of materials taken from the walled compound where bin Laden and his family lived to be made public by the U.S. government since May 2015. Materials that still have not been released are being withheld because they could harm national security, are blank, corrupted or duplicate files, are pornographic or are protected by copyright, said a CIA statement.

COURT DOCUMENT SHOWS MANAFORT WEALTH

4 Paul Manafort, former campaign manager for President Donald Trump, had three U.S. passports, millions in assets and ties to Russian oligarchs, according to federal court documents after his indictment on tax fraud and money laundering charges. Manafort and associate Rick Gates pose a significant flight risk because of the serious nature of the charges, the strong evidence of guilt, their wealth and "their history of deceptive and misleading conduct," federal prosecutors said in a filing Tuesday in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. Manafort, 68, and Gates, who also worked on Trump's campaign, pleaded not guilty on Monday in a 12-count indictment, ranging from money laundering to acting as unregistered agents of Ukraine's former pro-Russian government.

Kenney to launch fight for 'local control' of Philadelphia schools

Philly has watched the state control its schools since 2001, and now it is time for a change.

SAM NEWHOUSE
@scnewhouse
sam.newhouse@metro.us

Mayor Jim Kenney on Thursday is expected to lay the groundwork for a new chapter in his role as mayor by announcing plans to take on the School Reform Commission.

Kenney will give a major speech at 10 a.m. at City Hall regarding the Philadelphia School District's "financial needs and the future of its governance."

While he did not officially state his intentions on Wednesday, they were made clear in Kenney's introductory letter to his administration's new report, "Ensuring Quality Schools for Every Philadelphia Child," to be released Nov. 2.

"With a return to local control, the people of Philadelphia will finally be able to hold one person accountable for their school system, the mayor," Kenney wrote. "If we meet the district's need, restore local control and create clear accountability, we can create quality schools in every neighborhood."

The change won't happen overnight. Kenney's report calls for eight months of public hearings on the topic of dissolving the SRC.

But the state commission has controlled Philly schools for 16 years and is loathed by many of the public education and progressive activists who helped fuel Kenney's path to office. In December 2001, the Philly School Reform Commission (SRC) was established by the commonwealth of Pennsylvania to oversee the School District of Philadelphia. The commission is also in charge of reviewing charter school applications.

The SRC was born in December 2001 surrounded by controversy, strongly opposed by Philly leaders but negotiated as part of a deal in which the state increased funding but took control of the cash-strapped district. But in recent months, voices have been growing to fight the board.

Despite heavy educational service rollbacks, like the closure of two dozen Philly public schools in 2013, the district has recently enjoyed a period of relative stability and even growth.

The 2017 academic year saw 600 new hires join the district. And the SRC itself recently lauded Superintendent Dr. William Hite for his stewardship of the district.

"The results of Dr. Hite's steady leadership are evident across the School District of Philadelphia," the SRC said last week. "These include another year with a balanced budget, sustained investments in classrooms, a contract with the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers and, most importantly, the increased academic achievement of our students."

The SRC also bumped Hite's salary up to $311,760 as part of the union's contract renewal. Hite saved the school district $46 million by getting the teachers to agree to contribute earnings to their healthcare for the first time.

In addition, the city has opened 12 "community" schools and also says students get behavioral services they did not receive before.

Activists were already excited ahead of Kenney's announcement as they discussed the possibilities of a new school board.

"We are excited that there will potentially be forward movement on reclaiming local control of our schools," said Antione Little, chair of the Our City Our Schools coalition, which formed a year ago to push for abolition of the SRC. "We will continue to push for a true People's School Board — a board made up of the students, parents and educators who know our schools best, a transparent board that ends conflict of interests, and a board ready to fight for true racial and economic justice in our schools."

Students, teachers and activists protest the School Reform Commission. CHARLES MOSTOLLER

'Now is not the time to live in fear': NYPD commissioner

City officials shared new details about the terror attack by Sayfullo Saipov in lower Manhattan and urged New Yorkers to remain resilient.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
@MetroNewYork
nikki.mascali@metro.us

The day after Sayfullo Saipov drove a rented truck down a bike path on the west side of lower Manhattan, killing eight people and injuring 12 others, city officials urged New Yorkers to remain vigilant — and fearless — in the face of terrorism.

"Now is not the time to live in fear, to be fearful. It's time to be strong as we always are," NYPD Commissioner James O'Neill said at a news conference Wednesday morning.

Mayor Bill de Blasio echoed that sentiment.

"This was an attack on the United States of America and New York and our people. It was the definition of terrorism," de Blasio said. "This was an attack on our values, an effort to break our spirit, but it failed. New York City is a strong and resilient place."

Despite its tragic outcome, Gov. Andrew Cuomo, who called Saipov a "depraved coward," agreed the attack was unsuccessful at its core.

"The effort was to disrupt us, to terrorize us, to create mayhem. It failed," he said. "The Halloween parade was a beautiful example of the failure of the attempt."

Just hours after the terrorist attack, New York's annual Halloween parade went on as planned, with more than 1 million people — and a ramped-up police presence — in attendance.

New Yorkers can expect to continue seeing such increased patrols across the city, NYPD Chief of Department Carlos Gomez said.

As for the New York City Marathon on Sunday, Gomez said the NYPD will have its "most ever" deployment with more rooftop observation teams, sand trucks, blocker vehicles and cops in civilian attire mixing with the expected 2.5 million spectators. There will also be a "large number" of canines and counterterrorism officers and helicopter patrols.

"The marathon will go on because New York will go on," Cuomo said.

According to FDNY Commissioner Daniel Nigro, three of the 12 injured in Tuesday's attack have been released while nine remain in critical but stable condition. Injuries ranged from a bilateral amputation to several serious body traumas.

NYPD Deputy Commissioner of Intelligence & Counterterrorism John Miller said that Saipov, who was shot in the abdomen by Officer Ryan Nash after exiting the truck, remains hospitalized and in custody at Bellevue Hospital.

Miller said that it "appears he's been planning for a number of weeks" and that "he did this in the name of ISIS," based on a note found in the vehicle. Multiple knives were also recovered.

"The effort was to disrupt us, to terrorize us, to create mayhem. It failed."

Who is Sayfullo Saipov, the NYC terrorist? Here's what we know

Sayfullo Saipov is the man responsible for Tuesday's terror attack in New York City.

NIKKI M. MASCALI

20 MILES

SAIPOV WAS LIVING IN PATERSON, NEW JERSEY, JUST ABOUT 20 MILES FROM NYC, AT THE TIME OF THE ATTACK.

Sayfullo Saipov, a 29-year-old man, hit multiple victims with a rental truck on Tuesday afternoon, killing eight people and injuring at least 11 others.

Saipov was in custody at Bellevue Hospital on Manhattan's East Side after being shot and arrested by police. Saipov is reportedly an Uzbek citizen who has been in the United States on a green card since 2010. His ID said he was from Tampa, Florida.

Saipov moved to the U.S. from Uzbekistan about five or six years ago, Dilnoza Abdusamatova told the Washington Post. Abdusamatova said Saipov stayed with her family in Cincinnati, Ohio, for his first two weeks in the country because their fathers were friends.

An anonymous law-enforcement official told The New York Times that Saipov entered the country through JFK International Airport and had obtained a green card.

Saipov headed to Florida to start a trucking business, Abdusamatova said, adding that she believes he got married a year after arriving in the U.S. and may now have two children. Around that same time, she said, he cut off contact with them.

"He stopped talking to us when he got married," Abdusamatova told the Post.

While living in Fort Meyers, Florida, Saipov met Kobiljon Matkarov, another Uzbek immigrant, who told the Times that Saipov was "a very good person when I knew him," he said. "He liked the U.S. ... all the time he was happy and talking like everything is OK. He did not seem like a terrorist, but I did not know him from the inside."

While the terror suspect's history is still being investigated, it appears he was known to federal authorities, three officials told the Times. However, it is still unclear if he was being investigated himself or for being a family member or associate of someone who was.

Saipov eventually moved to Paterson, New Jersey, just about 20 miles from New York City, where he became an Uber driver. An official of the ride-hailing service told the Times that Saipov had passed its background check.

"We have been in contact with the FBI and have offered our assistance," they said, adding that they are reviewing Saipov's history with Uber "and at this time, we have not identified any related, concerning safety reports."

Gov. Andrew Cuomo said Saipov driving the vehicle on the bike path was a "lone wolf attack" and that there was no evidence it was part of a wider plot.

Witnesses said the man emerged from the truck and yelled "Allahu Akbar." When asked about it, Police Commissioner James O'Neill said the suspect made a statement, but didn't confirm Saipov yelled the phrase, which translates to "God is the greatest" in Arabic.

Police said he had a BB gun and a paintball gun with him.

Six of the people were pronounced dead at the scene, and two others were transported to the hospital and later died, officials said.

President Donald Trump tweeted about the attack, calling Saipov "sick and deranged."

NYPD identifies eight victims of the NYC terror attack

Eight people were killed in a terror attack in Manhattan on Tuesday, including friends visiting from Argentina and a woman visiting from Belgium.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

The eight victims of Tuesday's terror attack in lower Manhattan in which a man plowed a truck down a bicycle path have been identified by NYPD and include five friends visiting New York City from Argentina, a woman visiting from Belgium, a New York City man and a man from New Jersey.

The friends from Argentina were celebrating the 30th anniversary of their graduation from a polytechnic high school, Argentina's Ministry of Foreign Affairs said in a statement.

The victims were identified as Hernán Mendoza, 47; Diego Angelini, 47; Alejandro Pagnucco, 47; Ariel Erlij, 48; and Hernán Ferruchi, 47 by the Consulate General of Argentina in New York. Martin Marro, a sixth friend, was injured in the attack. As of Tuesday night, he was recovering at New York-Presbyterian Lower Manhattan Hospital.

The other victims are Anne Decadt, 31, from Belgium; Nicholos Cleves, 23, from New York City, and Darren Drake, 32, from New Milford, New Jersey.

The Argeninian men were part of a larger group of 10 people, according to Argentinian newspaper La Nacion. They were all from Rosario, Argentina, a port city along the Parana River that is about 300 miles northwest of Buenos Aires.

The men rented bicycles Tuesday afternoon and were exploring the city when the attack occurred, according to La Nacion. Erlij, 48, was a well-known businessman in Rosario, the paper reported, and was the one who organized the trip. Officials from their high school released a statement on Facebook expressing their "most sincere condolences to the families of the victims of the attack in New York City," all who were from the class of 1987.

Argentina President Mauricio Macri said on Twitter that he was "Deeply moved by the tragic deaths of this afternoon in NY."

The deputy prime minister and foreign affairs minister for Belgium, Didier Reynders, also made a statement on Twitter confirming that a Belgian national died in the attack.

"I am deeply saddened to announce a Belgian victim in Manhattan — I express my condolences to the family and friends," she wrote.

Local Belgian newspapers reported that Decadt was from Staden, a village of about 11,000 people. She was on a trip with her two sisters and mother, according to Het Laatste Nieuws.

Three other Belgians — a family of a mother, father and son — were also injured in the attack, the paper reported.

About a dozen people were injured in total, officials said. That included two New York City school staff members and students, according to a spokesperson for Schools Chancellor Carmen Fariña's office.

Trump calls for ending visa program after NYC attack, blasts Democrats

President Donald Trump seized on the fatal New York City truck attack to press his call Wednesday for tighter immigration measures to prevent terrorism, asking Congress to end the visa program under which the Uzbek immigrant suspect entered the United States.

Trump also said he would consider sending the suspect, identified by authorities as Sayfullo Saipov, to the military prison at the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, which his Democratic predecessor Barack Obama tried but failed to shut.

The Republican president tried to assign some blame for the attack to the Democrats' Senate leader, Chuck Schumer, who struck back in a speech on the Senate floor by saying that Trump should stop "politicizing and dividing America" at times of national tragedy.

The Department of Homeland Security said

President Trump lashed out at Democrats after the recent attack. GETTY IMAGES

Saipov entered the United States in 2010 through the so-called diversity visa program, designed to provide a path to U.S. residency for citizens from countries with historically low rates of immigration to the United States.

Trump called the suspect "this animal."

Trump reprised what has been his stance as a White House candidate and as president – that tougher immigration laws should be a first line of defense against such attacks.

"I'm going to ask Congress to immediately initiate work to get rid of this program," Trump told reporters.

"We have to get much tougher," he said. "We have to get much smarter. And we have to get much less politically correct. We're so politically correct that we're afraid to do anything."

Schumer helped create the diversity visa program in 1990 when he was a member of the House of Representatives, but he was also a member of a group of lawmakers who crafted a bipartisan immigration bill in 2013 that would have done away with the program. That bill was passed by the Senate but killed by the Republican-led House.

The program, via a lottery system, selects up to 50,000 people per year who receive U.S. visas, and eventually permanent residence in the United States. Those selected undergo U.S. security checks before being allowed to immigrate.

US lawmakers release sample of Russian-bought Facebook ads

The ads appeared to be aimed at setting up clashes over hot-button issues.

U.S. lawmakers released a batch of Russian-bought Facebook Inc. ads on Wednesday that showcased politically charged content allegedly spread on social media by Moscow ahead of the 2016 U.S. election.

Some of the ads criticized candidates, while others sought to organize or promote simultaneous rallies for opposite sides of divisive issues. The sample posted on a House committee website pulled from the roughly 3,000 ads Facebook provided to congressional investigators last month.

Tech companies recently acknowledged that Russia-based content on U.S. politics and social issues like gun rights, immigration, religion and race had spread on their platforms before and after the election.

Some of the ads sampled specifically dealt with the U.S. election and were critical of Democratic candidate Hillary Clinton. One from an account called "Army of Jesus" said Clinton was supported by evil forces.

"Hillary is a Satan, and her crimes and lies had proved just how evil she is," the post read. It added that Republican candidate Donald Trump was "an honest man" who "cares deeply for this country."

One ad from a group calling itself Heart of Texas promoted a rally in Houston on May 21, 2016, to "Stop Islamization" in the U.S. state. Another ad from a separate Facebook page promoted a pro-Islam rally at the same time and venue.

A staff member arranges a display showing social media posts during a House Intelligence Committee hearing. GETTY IMAGES

The Russian government has denied any attempts to sway the 2016 election, in which U.S. President Donald Trump defeated Clinton.

The ads were released at a U.S. House Intelligence Committee hearing, where lawyers from Facebook, Twitter Inc. and Alphabet Inc.'s Google testified about Russian influence on their networks.

It was the second straight day the companies attempted to ward off criticism from lawmakers that they were slow to respond to Russian abuse.

Facebook, the world's largest social media network, again came under the most scrutiny from lawmakers, who expressed frustration with the company because of its role in targeted marketing.

Facebook general counsel Colin Stretch told the committee that 16 million Americans may have been exposed to Russian information on Facebook's picture-sharing service Instagram beginning in October 2016. The election was on Nov. 8.

An additional four million may have seen such material on Instagram before October, though that data was less complete, Stretch said. REUTERS

Donald Trump Jr. took away this girl's Halloween candy to teach her a 'lesson' on socialism Twitter taught Donald Trump Jr. a lesson on Halloween.

The president's eldest son was trying to teach his young daughter a lesson in socialism, but we'll just say that lesson backfired. Spectacularly.

"I'm going to take half of Chloe's candy tonight & give it to some kid who sat at home. It's never to early to teach her about socialism," he tweeted.

The 6:53 p.m. post was paired with a photo of his young daughter and what appeared to be her haul of Halloween candy after trick-or-treating. Chloe was dressed as a police officer.

Within hours, his post had more than 72,000 comments, mainly from people who wanted to school Trump Jr. on socialism, Halloween and the difference between "to" and "too."

"As a teacher, I can't help but say that this is wrong on so many levels. Gosh how is this even possible to brag about on Twitter?" tweeted @maelagam.

This is Donald Trump Jr.'s daughter Chloe. TWITTER/@DONALDJTRUMPJR

Clearly, people had a problem using a child to make political points. Also, Trump Jr. spelled "too" wrong while trying to teach a lesson, so there's that.

Then there's Trump Jr.'s definition of socialism.

Rather than socialism — a political system defined by the government controlling the means of production and the distribution of goods and services — it appears Trump Jr. was actually talking about good old-fashioned sharing.

"Imagine thinking that teaching your child to share is bad," tweeted @Hermit_Hwarang.

Trump Jr. seemed to be trying to make some point about high taxes on the rich to share their wealth with the poor, but our own capitalist system already depends on the wealthy subsidizing the poor by way of the graduated income tax — something Twitter users were also all too quick to point out.

"My man, 'socialism' was her getting that free candy in the first place. You taking half for reasons she can't understand is capitalism," @Bearpigman tweeted.

Stephanie Beatriz wants 'The Light of the Moon' to start conversations

Michael Stahl David and Stephanie Beatriz in Jessica Thompson's directorial debut. IMAGINATION WORLDWIDE

Talking to the "Brooklyn Nine-Nine" actress about her new sexual-assault drama.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
@MetroPhilly
gregory.wakeman@metro.us

After five seasons as Rosa Diaz on "Brooklyn Nine-Nine," Stephanie Beatriz was looking to return to her dramatic roots, a world that she had previously loved "living" and felt most at home in.

It was at this point that she read the script for "The Light of the Moon," which tells the story of a woman named Bonnie who struggles in the aftermath of being raped. Beatriz recently told Metro she was immediately terrified by prospect of taking on the role — which is exactly why she immediately decided to take it, too.

But for all the heavy, weighty themes and content in "The Light of the Moon," Beatriz still sees the film as "hopeful," especially in the wake of the #MeToo viral campaign that saw millions of women across the world open up about when they have been sexually assaulted.

"We're all hopeful that things are shifting and changing. There's a sea change happening. We are not satisfied with the way the world is. It doesn't feel fair or safe for so many people in it. And we as humans want to make that change happen. I think all of us are so horrified. When that #MeToo was trending there were so many male friends that were horrified that so many women were coming forward with these stories, and then they were so disappointed that they didn't ask or didn't know that this was happening to the women in their lives."

"All of us as humans have a choice laying in front of us. All of us as humans are really powerful. Even if you don't feel like it. You are. You get to decide, through your daily actions, whether you make this world a better or worse place by how you interact with the people around you. And I think collectively right now we are in a place where a lot of us are saying, 'I refuse to let this stay the way it is. I have to do something. I have to say something. I have to make this place better. For all of us'."

"Quite a few" of Beatriz's friends are rape survivors, and their use of humor as a defense mechanism and refusal to let it be their "defining characteristic" aided her performance as Bonnie, while the "epic amount of research" and the "smart, natural" writing of first-time writer and director Jessica Thompson meant that Beatriz always felt confident enough to take risks with the character, too.

These risks are plainly evident throughout "The Light of the Moon," which was the 2017 SxSW Audience Award Winner in the Narrative Feature Competition and takes a humanistic, resonant, and constantly captivating look at such a harrowing experience. In the wake of the #MeToo viral campaign and the various allegations made against Harvey Weinstein and James Toback, "The Light of the Moon's" plot feels particularly timely, and Beatriz is hopeful that it will contribute to the discussion and make people believe "it is possible to create change in our world, and our global culture."

GETTY IMAGES

"I want people to walk away feeling like they have a jumping-off point to have more conversations about this in maybe a way that they didn't before. That's another amazing thing that film and television can do it can make people talk about things that they didn't even know they were supposed to talk about. You get to talk about what you thought about it, how it affected you, how you felt, and hopefully this will start a lot of conversations."

"The Light of the Moon" began screening at New York City's IFC Center on Wednesday and will be released later in the month in Los Angeles, Houston and Seattle.

SkyLodge is back for Season 2

Did someone say spiked hot chocolate?

JENNIFER LOGUE
@jenniferlogue
jennifer.logue@metro.us

Check out the spiked hot chocolate selections at Philly's SkyLodge. PROVIDED

Once again, Philly's tallest beer garden, SkyGarten, has transformed into SkyLodge for the fall and winter season.

Co-owner Mickey Rowley and business partner Doug Hager (Brauhaus Schmitz), "decked the halls" of SkyLodge with taxidermy, lots of plaid, toboggans and other key ski lodge elements.

"After such a successful run with SkyLodge last winter, we are stoked to bring it back along with our famous spiked hot chocolate bar," says Rowley. "Guests can expect more surprises this year, like a talking deer head and GM Jeff Schroth in a full Pennsylvania Tuxedo. If you don't know what it is, look it up!"

Guests can enjoy a shotski ($20), where four people can take a shot all at once on a ski. There will even be a roaring fireplace projected on a huge screen. Cozy up with your honey in the lounge area with rocking chairs, bean bags and a bear skin rug.

Getting hungry? Here is a look at the menu from Chef Mark Brinton:

Poutine Fries ($12), Mac & Cheese Balls ($8), Bourbon Buffalo Wings ($8/$14), BBQ Pork Sandwich ($9), Veggie Burger ($10), Bacon and Brie Burger ($12), Wurst Platter ($13) and Bavarian Bratwurst ($9).

Of course, no wintry night would be complete without hot chocolate and SkyLodge has a hot chocolate candy bar! Lead bartender Jesse Cornell has even more fixings for your hot chocolate this year, including Dr. McGillicuddy's Mentholmint, different flavored Baileys Irish Cream liqueurs, Buffalo Trace Cream, Fireball Cinnamon Whiskey, peppermint schnapps, and more. Guests can also top their hot chocolate with an array of candy, including chocolates, marshmallows, sprinkles, candy canes, whipped cream and syrups. Hot chocolates are $10 with alcohol or $5 without.

8 Can't-miss comedy shows in Philly for November

Helium will host Brian Posehn Nov. 9-11. MIKE FENN

Keep yourself stuffed with laughter through the holidays.

MIKE FENN
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

With November now here, there are countless end-of-the-year stressors. Visiting family! Holiday shopping! Securing opening night tickets for "Star Wars Episode VIII"! While nothing can really alleviate these annual spikes in your blood pressure, local and national comedians will once again hit stages in and around Philadelphia to help take your mind off of everything, even if it is only for an evening or weekend. Here are eight can't-miss comedy shows for November.

1 Hollywood Babble-On and Kevin Smith
Indie filmmaker Kevin Smith ("Clerks," "Dogma," "Red State") brings his vocal talents to Punchline Philly in Fishtown for two separate shows. On Nov. 3, Smith and Ralph Garman will host their celebrity- and movie-gossip podcast "Hollywood Babble-on." Smith returns Nov. 4 for a solo show, during which he will speak—at length—about anything on his mind.
If you go:
Nov. 3-4, 10:30 p.m., $38
Punchline Philly
33 E. Laurel St.,
215-606-6555
punchlinephilly.com

2 Big League
Local comedians Ari Fishbein and Michael S. Watkins bring their comedy and music show to the Barbary for a night of full entertainment. Taking the stage for November will be comedians Jon DelCollo, Kat Mosely, Annie Paradis, Brandon Jackson and Ian Fidance. Meanwhile, local band Darla will season the evening with their unique big-band stylings. If you can't make it, don't worry — Big League will return to the Barbary every first Saturday for a new show.
If you go:
Nov. 4, 8 p.m., $7-10
The Barbary
951 Frankford Ave.,
215-634-7400
barbarylive.com

3 Brian Posehn
You might recognize Brian Posehn's signature monotonous delivery from "Mission Hill," "The Sarah Silverman Program," "The Big Bang Theory" or any other of his numerous TV and movie credits. Posehn will grace the Helium stage in Rittenhouse Square with his dry and nerdy wit for three nights.
If you go:
Nov. 9-11
7:30 p.m., 8 p.m. & 10:30 p.m. $20-28
Helium Comedy Club

4 Lizzie Cooperman
The insanely hilarious Lizzie Cooperman will be in from L.A. for one night only at Good Good Comedy Theater in Chinatown. Cooperman is best known for her extensive written work on "The Eric Andre Show" and "Not Safe With Nikki Glaser." She hosts the Facebook web series "That Detox Life" alongside Emily Blotnick.

5 Rhett and Link Tour of Mythically
Popular internet comedy duo Rhett and Link keep audiences on and offline laughing with several acclaimed YouTube series and podcasts, as well as appearances on NPR, "The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon" and "Conan." The duo bring their brand of hilarity to the Keswick Theatre in Glenside with their Tour of Mythicality, named for their daily YouTube series "Good Mythical Morning."
If you go:
Nov. 11, 1 p.m. & 7 p.m., $30-40
Keswick Theatre
291 N. Keswick Ave., Glenside

6 Tell Me a Story: Wassailing
Area storyteller Hillary Rea returns to Shot Tower Coffee in Queen Village for the final Tell Me a Story of 2017. Armed with their interpretations of "wassailing,"storytellers Hannah Trav, Alejandro Morales, Kristen Finger, Nisse Greenberg, and David Hutchinson will hit the stage with hilarious and poignant stories.
If you go:
Nov. 15, 7:30 p.m., $5
Shot Tower Coffee
542 Christian St., Philadelphia

7 A Die Hard Christmas (Book Release Show)
Philadelphia's favorite comedian, Doogie Horner ("America's Got Talent") returns to his hometown stage with not only his comedic skills, but also his writing talents. Horner is celebrating the release of his latest book, "A Die Hard Christmas: The Illustrated Classic," which, of course, tells the timeless holiday tale of Bruce Willis' action movie staple John McClane. The show includes a live dramatic reading of the book as well as a few special guests and discussions.

On Saturday, Nov. 4, Hawthorne's Beer Cafe (738 S. 11th St.) celebrates fall with the 2nd Annual Great Cider and Beer Festival. From noon until 8 p.m., 11th St. will become one big party from Fitzwater to Catherine streets, showcasing 50+ beers, ciders and wine selections poured for $5 each. What's more, there will be food trucks, live music, kids' activities and more. Here are four things you can't miss at the 2nd Annual Great Cider and Beer Festival.

Sample 50 different selections of beer, cider and wine.
ALL PHOTOS PROVIDED

1. Beer and cider and wine — oh my!
There will be more than 50 selections of seasonal beer, cider and wine available for only $5 a pour. A few that caught our eye include Wyndridge's Cranberry Cider, Conshohocken's Type A IPA, Southern Tier's Salted Caramel, Evil Genius' Trick or Treat Chocolate Pumpkin and Forgotten Boardwalk's Funnel Cake.

2. Foodtrucks!

Over 1,000 people attended The Great Beer and Cider Festival last year.

With all that drinking, you're going to need some good eats to balance the alcohol-to-food ratio. Expect everything from tater tots to barbecue to tacos from Creme Brulee, El Tlaloc, Mama's Meatballs, Milk & Sugar, Nick's Roast Beef, PaperMill, Sum Pig, Surf & Turf, The Tot Cart and Waffles & Wedges.

3. Live Music
What could go better with drinks and eats than live music? Nothing! Expect a solid lineup from the John McNutt Trio kicking things off from noon until 3 p.m. DJ Christophonic will be spinning favorites from 3 p.m. to 4: 30 p.m. Philly's own Mass Folk Commons will close out the event from 4:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. with their folk, punk and Celtic rock sounds.

4. Kid-friendly fun
Fortunately for the parents, there is a fun zone for the kids as well. Activities include inflatable slides, face painting, giant bubble wands, a bean bag toss and more. There will even be a giant Velcro wall for both kids and adults.

Pretty in pink

Millennial pink may be trendy, but these places were rockin' the hue first.

Komodo National Park is pretty in pink. GETTY IMAGES

Fodor's Travel

Balos Bay

Legend has it that the sand at this Greek beach is pink due to the blood of thousands of Turks who died in battle. In reality, it's the abundance of crushed seashells that make the hidden lagoon on this picturesque Crete outpost so pink. The cliff views are surreal and there's an ancient Venetian castle nearby. The waters are warm, shallow, and family-friendly, but go early in the morning to avoid crowds. There are no amenities, so bring your own food and water and shade umbrellas if needed.

Pekelemeer Lake

The shocking pink waters of Pekelmeer Lake in Bonaire pop out of the blue like a mirage and are flanked by blindingly white mountains of salt that look like snow. The water is colored by the abundance of tiny brine shrimp that flourish within them. These shrimp attract more pink delights-flocks of Caribbean flamingos that number in the thousands and congregate to feast on the tiny crustaceans.

Lake Hillier

While most foreigners who make the giant leap across the ocean to explore Australia come to see the outback and the Great Barrier Reef, the breath-taking natural beauty of Western Australia is nothing to shake a stick at. Lake Hillier is a perfect example of Western Australia's lesser-known hidden gems; the pink salt water in this lake looks like something out of a fairy tale! Among other microorganisms, researchers attribute the bubblegum color of the lake to a type of micro-algae that thrives in salty conditions called dunaliella salina. The rare algae produce a pinkish-red dye to help it to better absorb sunlight under the water.

Pink Sands Beach

With the laid-back lifestyle, aquamarine-colored waters and famous Junkanoo carnival festivals, we know we don't need to give you another excuse to book a trip to the beautiful Bahamas. But, we've got one for you anyway: Harbour Island boasts powdery pale pink sands made from broken pieces of coral and tiny-shelled creatures (foraminifera).

Lake Hillier, Western Australia

Although the sand may be a lighter shade of pink than some of the other contenders on this list, Pink Sands Beach has been named one of the prettiest beaches in the Caribbean. The best time to view the sand's rosy hue is at sundown, or at low tide. Bring your snorkel; the water is calm and the reef is steps from the beach.

Las Salinas de Torrevieja

As it turns out, Australia isn't the only one with Kool-Aid color lakes. For similar biological reasons as Lake Hillier (high salt content and the micro-organisms that thrive in it), Valencia's Las Salinasde Torrevieja has a pink lake of its very own, and this one is home to 2,000 flamingos.

While the Spanish lake and the wildlife are absolutely stunning, locals know an even better secret; the pink lake in Spain's Las Salinas de Torrevieja has all the therapeutic properties of a natural spa. Treat yourself to a moisturizing mud bath and facemask and let it dry while you take in some sun. Rinse off with a soothing swim in the pink lake, the salt makes you almost as buoyant as in the Dead Sea, adding to the overall relaxation.

Pink Beach (Pantai Merah)

The UNESCO World Heritage Site of Komodo National Park in Indonesia is the perfect stopover for nature lovers visiting Indonesia.

Here, the soft, blushing sand and crystal-clear waters make it the ideal place to snap some envy-inducing vacation photos before delving into world-class snorkeling along the reef. Yet again, our microscopic friends (foraminifera) are responsible for the dazzling pink sands on this beach.

These tiny organisms turn the coral red, and when red coral particles crumble off into the sea, they mix with the white sand, and just like magic, it morphs into a pretty pink beach.

Hutt Lagoon

The Magenta ponds near Perth, Australia aren't exactly the spot to visit for your next beach vacation, but they are stunning to view from an airplane. As the largest Beta-Carotene farm on earth, Hutt Lagoon uses these salty pink algae ponds to manufacture vitamin supplements, pill casings, and food dye, among other things.

You may not have heard of Beta-Carotene but you've surely consumed it. It's the scientific name for the brightly colored pigment that gives vegetables such as carrots and sweet potatoes their vibrant shades of orange and red. Not only is it used as an organic food coloring agent, but also when ingested, beta-carotene turns into vitamin A, which is great for your skin and eyesight.

NFL power rankings | by Luke Miller

No. 1

Eagles
7-1 (W vs. SF)

The Eagles got reinforcements ahead of Tuesday's trade deadline, sending a fourth round pick to Miami for running back Jay Ajayi. Most expected the Eagles to be looking for help at left tackle after Jason Peters injury, but it's clear they're are doubling down on their early success.

No. 2

Patriots
6-2 (W vs. LAC)

The Patriots lead the league in total yardage, the only team averaging more than 400 yards per game, but it's not translating into touchdowns. The Pats rank just seventh in average points scored, and a big reason is settling for field goals. The Patriots have kicked four more field goals (11) between 20-29 yards than any other team.

No. 3

Steelers
6-2 (W vs. DET)

The Steelers set the bar for bend-but-don't-quite-break defenses this week, allowing Matthew Stafford to throw for 423 yards, but limiting them to five field goals. What the Lions couldn't do up close, the Steelers did from a distance, sending JuJu Smith-Schuster 97 yards to the endzone on his way to a seven catch, 193 yard game.

No. 4

Vikings
6-2 (W vs. CLE)

The Vikings enter their bye with most of the interesting chatter settling around Teddy Bridgewater, reportedly ready to return to playing for the first time since suffering a knee injury in practice before the 2016 season. The question that needs to be asked: do the Vikings mess with a good thing by returning to their franchise QB?

No. 5

Saints
5-2 (W vs. CHI)

The Saints survived two Mark Ingram fumbles in this win. It was an unusual day for Ingram, whose three lost fumbles in 2017 are already a career high. The Saints sit only a game ahead of Atlanta but point differentials of plus-46 for the Saints, plus-six for the Panthers give a better idea of how these teams have performed thus far.

No. 6

Chiefs
6-2 (W vs. DEN)

With Tyreek Hill and Kareem Hunt shut down by the Denver defense, the Chiefs turned to Travis Kelce, catching half of the team's 14 completions and accounting for 133 of their 202 passing yards. Marcus Peters had an INT, and ripped off a fumble return for a score.

No. 7

Rams
5-2 (BYE)

The Rams spent their bye week falling to second place in the division as the Seahawks matched their win total in a dramatic shootout with Houston. That's got to have them chomping at the bit for their next game against the Giants, equally refreshed after a bye too.

No. 8

Bills
5-2 (W vs. OAK)

Buffalo has forced at least three turnovers in four straight games. The Bills were active this week, trading defensive tackle Marcell Dareus to Jacksonville while trading for Kelvin Benjamin from the Panthers. They're now 4-0 at home but have to hit the road to face the Jets.

No. 9

Seahawks
5-2 (W vs. HOU)

This game proved Russell Wilson can do everything on his own, but with Duane Brown arriving to play left tackle, the Seahawks hope he won't keep having to. Wilson threw for 452 yards and four touchdowns in the wild victory over Houston.

No. 10

Panthers
5-3 (W vs. TAM)

The Panthers won for the first time in three weeks on the play of their defense, which allowed no touchdowns for the second straight week. Even in victory the Panthers' offense continued to struggle, averaging 4.8 yards per pass and 3.2 yards per rush.

Best of the rest

11 — Cowboys (4-3)
12 — Jaguars (4-3)
13 — Falcons (3-3)
14 — Ravens (4-4)
15 — Packers (4-3)
16 — Texans (3-4)
17 — Lions (3-4)
18 — Chargers (3-5)
19 — Titans (4-3)
20 — Broncos (3-4)
21 — Washington (3-4)
22 — Dolphins (4-3)
23 — Bengals (3-4)
24 — Raiders (3-5)
25 — Jets (3-5)

5 Numbers to know about Eagles at 2017 halfway point

The Eagles have the best record in all of football. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

The most important number to know about the Eagles is 7-1 — the best record in the NFL and three wins better than the Cowboys in the NFC East. But it's not the only number you should know as Philly prepares to host Denver.

Here's a look at some interesting stats to keep mindful of as Week 9 approaches:

Rushing first downs per game for the Eagles — the fourth best in football. With the Eagles confident both on the ground and through the air on all downs, from all distances, it makes it much harder for defenses to slow them down.

19

Carson Wentz leads the NFL with 19 passing touchdowns. Only three NFL QBs age 24 or younger have thrown 19+ TDs and no more than five INTs through eight games: Wentz, Matthew Stafford in 2011 and Dan Marino in 1984.

70.4

The defense also allows the fewest rushing yards and rushing attempts per game of any NFL team. This is partially because with the fourth best scoring offense in the league, Philly has a lead and sees much more passing than running.

3.9

Philly's defense allows less than four third down conversions per game. That's an impressive stat. In the top five among all NFL teams, getting the ball back for the offense is a defense's main job.

33:37

The Eagles still possess the football more than any other team in the NFL, thanks in part to the most rushing attempts in the league. Which is certainly a recipe for winning. EVAN MACY

10 Phillies top prospects for 2018: When will they reach big leagues?

How much of the Phillies current line up will remain, and how much will be replaced by the talented farm system?

EVAN MACY
@evan_macy
evan.macy@metro.us

Last year, Baseball America credited the Phillies farm system with having seven of the top 100 prospects in baseball. It was seemingly a watershed year as several young players like J.P. Crawford, Rhys Hoskins and Nick Williams all made their Major League debuts and the team got substantially younger.

With 42-year-old manager Gabe Kapler taking the reins, the youth movement will likely continue as the team hopes to round into competitive form over the next two seasons or so.

Here is a look at the 10 players Baseball American lists as Philadelphia's best prospects, and when we expect to see them playing in South Philly::

1 J.P. Crawford, SS

Despite some issues at the plate — he hit just .214 in 70 plate appearances in September with the Phillies — Crawford's potential remains really high as he still flashes the best glove of any prospect on the Phils' farm. He will almost definitely be Philadelphia's opening day starter at shortstop.
MLB ETA: 2018

2 Sixto Sanchez, RHP

Sanchez hasn't risen past Single-A Clearwater yet but he still is the best pitcher in Philly's system and could be a future ace. He has the best fastball in the organization and that pop could get him on the fast track. He will probably begin the year in Double-A Reading.
MLB ETA: 2019

3 Scott Kingery, 2B

He's the best minor league hitter the Phillies have — and he tore through Double and Triple-A in 2017. He has a good chance of making the opening day roster, as the Phillies resisted calls for his promotion all throughout his age-23 season.
MLB ETA: 2018

J.P. Crawford will be a contender for Rookie of the Year next season if he can play to his potential. GETTY IMAGES

4 Adonis Medina, RHP

The future mid-rotation starter is still just 20 and has some work to do before making it through the higher levels of the minors, but he still lands in the BA top 100 and has a very high ceiling. MLB ETA: 2021

5 Adam Haseley, OF

Last year's No. 8 overall pick his 284 across three different low-minors levels last year and could also be on a fast-majors track.
MLB ETA: 2020

6 Jojo Romero, LHP

Finally some left-handed talent — an area lacking for the Phillies since Cole Hamels' youth. Romero has four great pitches and has a 2.27 ERA combined over his first two seasons. He's just 21 but could be Philly bound before you know it.
MLB ETA: 2020

7 Jhailyn Ortiz, OF

Just 18, Ortiz showed average and power in Low-A ball. He has a while to go and some good players blocking him in the outfield but good hitting can make that irrelevant. He's on a slow-roll to the bigs.
MLB ETA: 2022

8 Jorge Alfaro, C

Alfaro is solidifying himself as the catcher of the future for the franchise. In 29 games with the Phillies this fall he his .318 and smashed five homers. He will start at catcher next season.
MLB ETA: 2018

9 Mickey Moniak, OF

Moniak was the No. 1 overall pick in 2016. He has had ups and downs early in his career but still shows promise and could be a speedy leadoff hitter sometime soon.
MLB ETA: 2021

10 Franklyn Kilome, RHP

The 21-year-old ascended all the way to Double-A last year — thanks to a spectacular curveball. If he can start the year in Triple-A, he could be in the bigs by 2019.
MLB ETA: 2019

Ever wonder how a better night's sleep might affect your child?
Researchers at Temple University are conducting a research study to learn more about how improving children's sleep affects their weight status and type 2 diabetes risk.
To be eligible, your child must:
Be African American/Black
Be 8-11 years old
Sleep 9.5 hours or less each night
All families will learn how to improve their child's sleep and will be screened for type 2 diabetes risk.
Families who are eligible and enroll in the study will be compensated for their time.
Please all 215-707-8998 to see if you and your child qualify for this study.

Aries Offer kindness, compassion and reasonable suggestions. A partnership can flourish if you are willing to compromise and lay down some ground rules.

Taurus An unexpected turn of events will leave you wondering what to do next. If you gather proper information, you'll realize you have nothing to worry about.

Gemini Make a big splash if you want to be noticed. Your ability to adapt to whatever comes your way will give you a competitive edge. Romance is in the stars.

Cancer A steady pace will get you where you want to go. Discipline, hard work and the willingness to help others will help you counter any negativity you feel or face.

Leo Don't let an opportunity pass you by just because you are being stubborn. Work around your differences. A personal change will be rewarding.

Virgo Don't bend if someone tries to goad you into making a donation or signing a deal. Negotiate on your own behalf. Ask pertinent questions before you proceed.

Libra Change is inevitable. Discipline will be required to manipulate a situation to your liking. Relationships, when handled properly, will stabilize. Keep the peace.

Scorpio Push hard to bring about the changes that will help you get ahead at work or where your personal finances are concerned. Persistence will pay off in the end.

Sagittarius Home improvements, physical alterations and stabilizing personal elements are favored. Make love and romance a priority. Pitch in and help a cause you care about.

Capricorn An emotional disturbance could result in problems with a friend or neighbor. Don't do something you'll regret when you should be concentrating on getting ahead.

Aquarius If you love someone, share your feelings. A joint venture can change the way you earn your keep. Embrace new beginnings and partnerships that offer stability.

Pisces An unexpected change will turn out to be a blessing. Embrace what comes your way. Going against the current will cause a stalemate. EUGENIA LAST
